Children Must Leave Their Revolvers
Outside the Schoolroom—War Declared on Cigarette Dealers.

LANSING, Feb. 23.—The board of education proposes to look into the matter of revolvers and cigarettes as necessary adjuncts of pupils' outfits, and at its regular meeting last night adopted a resolution offered by Mr. Hall, instructing the committee on schools and teachers to make a further investigation, with a view to ascertaining just how far the state of affairs revealed by the Cottingham episode at the Townsend street school last week, exists in the other schools of the city. As to the ownership of revolvers, the board does not see just how it can interpose its authority, but there is a law which prohibits the sale of tobacco to minors, and if the parents of pupils do not care to see to it that the destructive cigarette habit does not take a firm hold upon the children, it is possible that the board will take steps to prosecute the dealers who are openly violating this statute. The committee appointed to investigate this matter was instructed to report upon the advisability of employing a truancy officer, whose duty it shall be to see that the law in this regard is strictly enforced.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Feb. 23.—The elegant new $25,000 club house of the Pere Marquette club was dedicated last evening by a grand ball. The building is one of the handsomest structures of its kind in this part of the state. It is a two-story brick and stone structure, with all the appliances of the modern club house.

Joseph Crowe, 45 years old and a bachelor, dropped dead from disipation and heart disease in a saloon at Iron Mountain Monday. Crowe had been employed as an engineer at the Hamilton Mine and was considered a competent man. Last summer a man was crushed in the shaft and the fact preyed upon Crowe's mind, though he was not blamed for the accident. He has been drinking hard ever since.

A Man Without Hair.

Richard Kade, who died in Greene county, New York, in the spring of 1898, was surely a subject for a dime museum, even though he now descended to that level. Recently speaking, Kade was in several respects a most remarkable creature. He was born without hair, not even having patches where his hair should have been. His deformity, and as it was, may be said to have been partly alleviated by the curious construction of the inner portion of his head, which enabled him to bear common conversation through his mouth.

His black hair was interspersed with oddly shaped spots of white, which, however, did not take on their distinctive shapes until after he had passed his fiftieth year.

When Mr. Kade died he left one son, aged forty-five, whose hair was as black as coal, not a single gray hair being discernible, and another son, thirteen years of age, whose hair was as gray as that of a man of seventy.—Wheeling (W. Va.) Register.

A Peasant's Appeal to His King.
At Szeged, in Hungary, lives a poor peasant farmer named Pero Bati. The destruction of his crops and loss of cattle had plunged him into difficulties. One sleepless night he conceived a novel idea, and rose early the next morning and carried it out. The idea took the form of the following epistle:

To the Most Honorable and Well Born King King.
My cow is dead—with great respect I submit this—and my noble farm produce has been struck down with halitosis. The wicked "man in possession" plagues me sorely, though he is my brother-in-law's godfather. There is no living soul in Szeged who can lend me a krusch, because no one in Szeged has a krusch. If my lord would lend me a couple of gulden—for which he has no immediate need—I would pay him back with interest when my next year's kukarus crop (maize) is sold. I trust that good health may wait upon my good king and his exalted house, and also his dear family. Oh, that I could kiss the pretty hands of our high born lady queen! All happiness to your king's majesty. Truly yours,

Pero Bati.
This letter was duly dispatched and a messenger was sent to ascertain the truth of Bati's statement. This proving correct, the two gulden (about three shillings) which the emperor was "not in immediate need of" were placed at Pero Bati's disposal.—London News.
